"When Doyle and Meyers Aren't Hitting, We Don't Win," Is Slogan of Giants; Both Players Are Liable to Poke Wildly at Bad Ones When Their Hitting Powers Desert Them as Last Year.

By Frank G. Menke.

Doyle is more of a problem than layers, for the reason that Doyle's alling off last senson was probably due as old injury sustained in an automatile accident the year before. The aus will remember that Larry drove in Chalmers trophy into a large, trong tree out Fordham way, just before a world's series, and that for both one days if was feared that he would was the ninth inhant. Two men were out and the game was over. The Braves had not be able to get into the champion out and the Braves had a man on first lost.

"Hap," said Stallings, "I want to know why you bunted with two out and two on bases." "Well, you see, boss." explained "Hap," I thought I'd double cross the other fellows."

"Double cross 'em" asked Stallings, puzzled.

"Yes. You see they were looking for me to hit it out and I thought I'd catch 'em asleep with a bunt.

"Oh, that's it, eh," said Stallings. "Thought you'd double cross em, hey." Well, you didn't double cross them but you did double cross me. I've spent the whole night trying to figure out why you bunted. That's the resison eh—wanted to double cross the other fellows."

"Yes: that's it."

"Well, temme tell you this, "Hap Myers," and Stallings poked a mensoing finger at his big first buseman. "If you ever again try any of that double crossing stuff there'll be a funeral in the particular neighborhood, Good day—double crosser," And Stallings walked away.

Shallings walked away.

One of Stallings' superstitions is that it Jinxes his team if there is any one in the box that looks directly into the Braves dug out. To prevent this, Stallings always requests the home club not to sell that particular box. The clubs usually grant Stallings's request but it sometimes happens that some folks in the grandstand wanter down into that box. Such an event took place in Philadelphia.

Stallings saw that the intruders were looking curiously into the Braves "dug out." The game was close. Stallings wanted to win it—and here he was being jinxed by the interlopers. Stallings jumped to his feet and yelled some orders to a number of his utility players.

Two minutes later wir of the ball.

Inyers.

Two minutes later six of the ball layers rushed into sight dragging the once rarpaulin that is used to cover the lamond on rainy days.

They pulled the cauxas over to a solnt between that box and the Braves for out.

Some time later a similar intrusion occurred in another city. Stallings rave orders to holst the tarpaulin, but the tarpaulin was locked up somewhere and couldn't be located.

"Well, set 'em away—and set 'em away quiek." commanded Stallings, pointing to the interlopers in the box.

"What'll we do?" asked Occur Duzer, utility man for the Braves and one of the official "shooers" of the undesirable.

"Bust their recovery."

"Bust their noses—douse 'em with water—do anything you want—but get em away before they hoodo us." yelled Stallings, growing more excited every noment as the parties in the box continued to stare at the Brayes in their dug out.

GOLF AND TENNIS GAIN POPULARITY

New York, March 3,-Statisticians tell us there are approximately 700,000 golfers in the country today, and that about 150,000 of these developed has year alone. There are near 20,000 who play the game in and about St. Louis alone: more than 50,000 who disport on the links in and around Chicago; gractically 100,000 solfers in Greater New York and vicinity. The links have drawn mightly from the grandstand and bleachers, from the latter especially since municipal park departments have been putting the game of golf within the reach of the man of average means.

If not more, tennis has fully as many devotees as golf. It, too, has made big strides in the past few years, it is attracting its thousands to the courts as away from ball parks, for the same reason that the golfer leaves the national pastime for the links.

Not so apparent, but none the legal certain is the effect on baseball attendance of the low-priced motor can motorboat and motorcycle. Observe the drives also about any great metropolis on a about 150,000 of these developed last
